About Virginia Quilt Museum at Silver Lake Mill

Exciting News! - The Virginia Quilt Museum moved June 29, 2024, from the Warren-Sipe House in Downtown Harrisonburg to the historic Silver Lake Mill in Dayton, Virginia. This move marks an exciting milestone for the museum as it seeks to expand its offerings and enhance accessibility for guests.

The new location at the iconic Silver Lake Mill will provide a spacious setting for more exhibitions throughout the year, allowing visitors to enjoy a wider variety of quilts and textile art. Additionally, the move will offer far greater accessibility and comfort for guests, ensuring an enhanced museum experience for all.

Quilters who will be visiting the area are urged to check the changing exhibits and partake of the special events scheduled through the year. Quilts are exhibited on the second and third floors. There is also an extensive display of antique sewing machines and a Civil War Gallery featuring quilts and historical displays related to that era. The Museum Shop is filled with quilted items, books, jewelry, tote bags, stationery, patterns, heritage toys and activities for children, and other quilting-related items.

The Virginia Quilt Museum is open 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday. Closed for major holidays and ten days between exhibits.

Admission:

General Admission - $7

Members of Museum - FREE

Students Age 5-18 - $5

Building: Built in 1845 by Josiah Greenough Peabody, the Greek Revival building is the site of the city's first savings bank which was established to encourage thrift among mill workers, particularly young women. The Museum was founded in 1987 by the New England Quilters' Guild and the building was purchased as the Museum's home in 1993.

Location: Lowell is the site of the Lowell National Historic Park and the Museum of American Textile History. Lowell's rich tradition of textile manufacturing makes it the ideal location for the Quilt Museum. Fabrics produced in Lowell's mills were used throughout the nation by makers of clothing and quilts. Because many mill workers were women, the city is also an important site for labor and women's history.

Parking: Visitor parking is available at meters on Shattuck and Middle Streets, the National Park Service Visitor Center lot, and the city of Lowell parking garage on Market Street. The parking lot behind the building is available on weekends only. Handicapped parking is available behind the building.

About Pacific Northwest Quilt & Fiber Arts Museum

Established in 1997, The La Conner Quilt & Textile Museum is housed in the historic 1891 Gaches Mansion in the artistic waterfront town of La Conner, Washington. This unique museum features three stories of quilts and textiles that range from traditional to contemporary, with a focus on works from the Northwest. On the first floor, Victorian-era furnishings complement changing selections from the growing permanent collection.

With two new exhibits opening every three months and a rotation of quilts from our permanent collection, there is always something new to see at Washington State's only quilt museum.
